The facts as they appeared in the trial are that Miss kinselia boarded a car in Lawrence to ride to Haverhill. The car was crowded. She was obliged to stand all the way, holding by the strap. Finally the car ran off the track.

Miss Kinselia was not thrown down and hurt, but she was thrown to one side and her left wrist, by which she was holding to the strap, was wrenched. She did not red any great trouble from it that night, but the next day Il pained her. Finally, an operation had to be performed, and the doctors say she has tuberculosis in the arm, and that amputation will eventually be necessary above the elbow. They pronounce the injury a very serious one.

SUBWAYS WOULD STOP CONGESTION OF CARS

Chicago Addresses Local Club on Proposed Plan.

SPECIAL JUDGES BILL KILLED, SPEAKS ON TRAFFIC PROBLEM.

Bion J. Arnold Declares Underground Tracks Are the Only Remedy for Rapid Street-Car Service in Large Cities.

"A system of subways is the legical so'ution of the transportation problem in a large city," said Bion J. Arnold, city consulting electric engineer of Chicago, hast night in the course of his fecture before the St. Louis Engineers' Club, Mr. Arnold has recently completed a report to the Committee on Lecal Transportation of the Chlesgo City Council. In this report be outlined plans which would give the citizens of Chicago the less transportation facilities obtainable under existing rare exception the best of men have believed that there is a life after death. This conclusion has been reached through processes of reasoning in part, but generally because of a universal longing and expectancy, an indication that the human soul has needs which cannot be satisfied in time.

Christianity, more than any other system of religion, meets this deafre of the heart.
Jesus brought life and immortality to light.
But the settlement of the primary question awakened others, not less important, whose answer has been diligently sought. How much of man survives the grave? Does the body meet an irretirevable overthrow?
Does it moulder back to its primary elements, there to remain and leave the disembodied soul to enter upon a new state of existence? Theologians are not agreed on this point.

embodied soul to enter upon a new state of existence? Theologians are not agreed on this point.

THE FIRST FRUITS—(Vernes 20 and 21.) The fact and mode of Christ's resurrection are presented by the apostle as proof of a general resurrection. Among the Jews it was customary to gather a sheaf of the early harvest. Men were sent by the Sanhedrin into some field near Jerusalem to cut the barley to be waved before the Lord Lev., xxii. 15). That first fruit was the piedge of the harvest to follow. So Jesus, bursting the bands of the grave and coming again among the living, is the promise and beginning of a restoration for the race. Death came through Adam, as the result of sin, the apostle declares (verse 22). Life is to be given through Christ (John, xi. 25). The great purpose of Jesus in coming into the world was to undo the mischief wrought through the transgression in Eden. His resurrection was therefore an important item in the blan of his mission.

THE FRESHILY INHERITANCE—(Verse 50) The denial contained in this verse had a double reference. There were those who supposed that the next life was a matter of race privilege. This was the colution of most Jews, who regarded themselves as the special favorities of heaven (Matt ill. 5), who expected to meet Abraham after death as his children. Paul declares that such inheritance was utterly impossible, and that it must be wholy dismissed from the mind. This statement gave ground for hope to the people of other nations. There was another view equally prejudicial to the truth—that a future existence was to be secured through the virtuous conduct of this life, the good being thus rewarded. Evidently the young man who came to Jesus had this thought. (Mark x. 17.) He was ready and anxious to do something to inherit eternal life. But fiesh and blood, human nature as its best, cannot merit it, so the aboute asserts.

THE BUDDEN CHANGE—(Verses 51 and 22.) The two modes of the resurrection are Perguson, Chicago; J. W. Hanna, Summer, Ia.; J. M. Hall, St. Louis. man nature at its best, cannot ment it, so the abostle asserts.

THE SUDDEN CHANGE—(Verses 5) and 52.) The two modes of the resurrection are then presented as proof that it results from some power external to man. Some men will sleep, that is die, this expression significant will sleep, that is die, this expression significant in the sunday Republic, Consolt the Rent control of Sudday Republic, Consolt the Rent control of Suday Republic, Co

THE CLOSING THOUGHTS—We see in these closing verses how eminently practical, and, hence, valuable, in the apostle's mind is this doctrine. He does not unfold it to gratify curiestiv, to help decide an academic debaie, to fill the mind with some general statement by which it may reach intellectual coaccusions. His one grand purpose is to bring the influence of the doctrine with all possible force to bear upon the spirit and method of fiving. Because we shall live again, therefore, live in this way here. This is really the method of all the Scripture. Its practical parts are deducible from its doctrinal parts. Life is based on creat verities. Men must be not do in accordance with the established order of things, adjusting themselves in a thankful and humble way to the appointed plan of God. This is evangelical rationalism. This is wisdom and security. This is life and peace.

posed Causes Little Comment. The statement in a morning newspaper esterday that Chief of Police Kiely is e succeeded on August 1 by Inspector Edward Laily caused only laughter among those who are in a position to know,
"It's all news to me," said Chief Kiely.
"I do not care to discuss it further than to deny the report that there is any friction letween me and any member of the Board of Polite Commissioners." between me and any member of the Beard of Police Commissioners.

Inspector Laily said: "I never have been a caudidate for the office of Crief of Police, although my name has been connected with the rosition on numerous occasions. I never heard of such a thing, Colonel Kiely has made an admirable Chief and I do not think there is any prospect of such a change being made."
